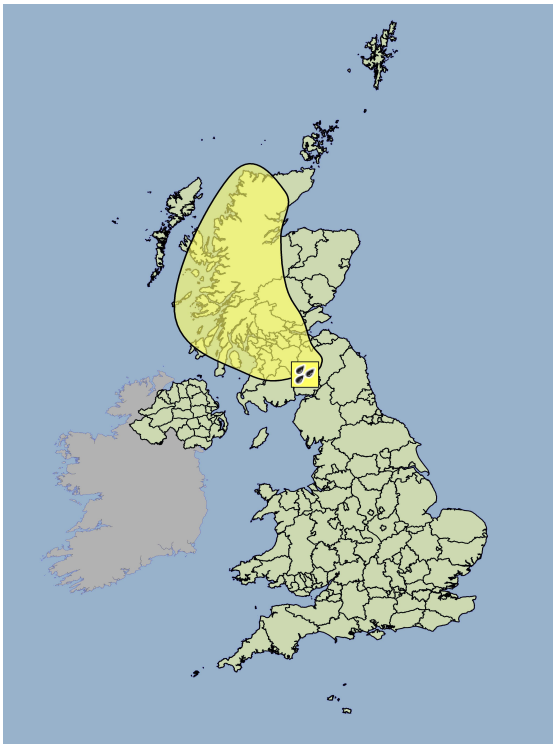
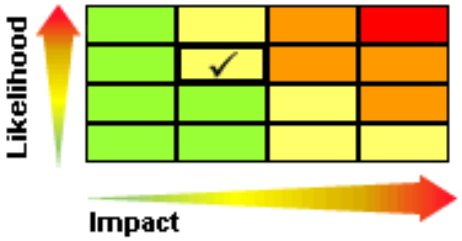
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of low pressure will continue to track northwards through Sunday. Near the low centre conditions will become more unstable inland, especially by this afternoon when some heavy, thundery showers look likely. These showers will be slow-moving due to the light winds near the centre of the area of low pressure. Some areas may see 20 mm of rain fall in a short space of time whilst other nearby locations remain dry.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:40 on Sun, 03rd Aug 2014 until 23:00 on Sun, 03rd Aug 2014

Scattered, slow-moving thundery downpours are expected to develop through today. Some areas will miss these, but where they do occur some large rainfall totals may be experienced in a short period of time, the effects of which may be exacerbated by yesterday's rain.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding and of disruption to transport and outdoor activities.

This is a further update to the warning issued on Thursday, reducing its size by removing the warning from parts of the east and northeast of Scotland.
